LAYING A BRITISH GHOST.

East India Natives Used an English
Formula, So They Thought,

Lord Crewe, secretary of state for India, told a story of the jungle when bidding goodbye to a number of officers
newly appointed to government service
in India at an informal reception
at the India office.

"I remember hearing years ago in India a story of a young subaltern who went alone on a shooting expedition away into the wild country of the Malabar coast. The poor fellow was attacked by fever in the jungle, died and was buried, and the people where he died felt themselves in no little difficulty as to how his spirit might be pacified and not haunt them.

"It was necessary, therefore, to place upon his grave something distinctively British, which would keep the spirit quiet. They were a hundred miles from any cantonment, but I was told that a small party of these simple folk went down to this cantonment and purchased a bottle of whisky, two bottles of soda water and a paper of cheroots, which they placed on the grave, and I was told that, in spite of difficulties, every year a party of them
trooped down for the same purpose.

"It seems a matter for regret that a concrete expression of England's national genius could not have found outlet in a different formula."—Pall Mall Gazette.

The British court of appeal affirmed the verdict that negligence in navigation caused the Titanic disaster in April, 1912. This makes the company liable for a million dollars' damages in actions which are now pending against it by relatives of the victims of this great disaster. The point before the court was whether the wreck was caused by the officers' negligence or by 'the act of God.'

That a farm hand who hires with an employer on a yearly contract and who leaves in violation of such an agreement, is not only not entitled to his wages, but is also liable for damages sustained to the crop of his employer, was the ruling established when County Judge Talbot Macbeth handed down his finding in a suit recently tried at a special session in London, Ont.

The Grand Trunk train from Toronto, which is due in Kingston at 11 o'clock, won a race with the stork last week. Mrs. Thos. Robinson, of Shannonville, was driving towards that station when her horse ran away, throwing her out of the sleigh. Mrs. Robinson, who was in a delicate condition at the time, did not feel any ill-effects of her shaking up. She took the train, and her condition became very serious. At Collins' Bay, the first stop west of Kingston, an urgent call was sent to Kingston, and a doctor was waiting when the train pulled in. The woman was first taken to a local hotel, thence transferred to Hotel Dieu. She had hardly arrived when birth was given to a daughter. Both mother and child are doing well.

NEW ULSTER SOLUT

Sir Horace Plunkett Makes Novel Proposals.

LONDON, Feb. 10. — Sir Plunkett, noted for his advocacy of agricultural co-operation and education, whose opinion matters carries great weight in parties, outlines in The Daily News plan for settling the problem. He is firmly of the opinion that the passage of the bill as it stands will lead to sectarian riots, perhaps to civil war in Ulster, and to avert such a catastrophe he proposes that the Ulsterists should accept the bill upon conditions:

First, that a clause should be inserted enabling it to be decided by plebiscite after a certain number of years, whether any section of the population desired to continue subject to the Irish Parliament.

Second, that both sections of the population should be invited to suggest to the Government any amendment which could be incorporated in the bill by consent.

Third, that the Ulster vol should be given an opportunity to come organized as a territory with the double object of a valuable body to the nation's service forces, and preserving in the Ulster Unionists an ultimate guard, on which, rightly or wrongly, they can rely for the preservation of their liberties.

Sir Horace contends that since of this scheme would form a valuable experiment for the sides in the home rule difficulty.

W ULSTER SOLUTION.

Mr. Plunkett Makes Three Novel Proposals.

DON, Feb. 10. — Sir Horace Plunkett, noted for his advocacy of rural co-operation and technical education, whose opinion in Irish circles carries great weight with all, outlines in The Daily Mail a plan for settling the Ulster question. He is firmly of the opinion that the passage of the home rule bill stands will lead to serious civil wars, perhaps to civil war, and to avert such a disaster, he proposes that the Ulster Unionists should accept the bill upon three conditions:

1. That a clause should be inserted enabling it to be decided by a vote after a certain number of years whether any section of Ulster should continue subject to the British Parliament.

2. That both sections of Irish should be invited to suggest to the government any amendments which could be incorporated in the bill.

3. That the Ulster volunteers be given an opportunity to be organized as a territorial force, the double object of adding a body to the nation's defences, and preserving intact for the Unionists an ultimate safeguard which, rightly or wrongly, they rely for the preservation of their liberties.

Horace contends that acceptance of this scheme would furnish a fair experiment for the various sections of the home rule difficulty.

AGAINST IMPEACHMENT.

Bishop of Canterbury Refuses To Arraign Bishops.

DON, Feb. 10.—The Archbishop of Canterbury yesterday definitely announced against instituting impeachment proceedings against the bishops of Uganda and Mombasa, of England prelates in Africa, on charges of heresy and schism arising from their action at the Kikuyu conference, East Africa, last June. The archbishop was then made to unite with the other denominations against increasing power of the Roman Catholics in East Africa, and a general union service was held. The matter is now to be referred to a consultative body of bishops of the Church of England, which meets in London. The bishops will then be asked to decide whether the scheme of federation of Protestant mis-sionary societies proposed at the Kikuyu conference contravenes the principles of the church order, and whether the holy communion service should be closed the conference, at which the communicants were not members of the Church of England, consistent with the principles of the Church of England.

PARCEL POST STARTED

Souvenir Mail Bag to Duke Is First Packet Carried.

Inscribed Leather Pouch Will Be Used to Take Official Mail to Rideau Hall in Future—Bouquet of Flowers Goes to Mme. Pelletier From Postal Staff—Postmaster-General Optimistic.

OTTAWA, Feb. 10.—"First packet sent by Canadian parcel post, Feb. 10, 1914."

Such was the inscription in raised letters upon three brass bars affixed to the face of the handsome leather mail bag which was despatched as the first parcel post to His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught by Hon. L. P. Pelletier, Postmaster-General, at 12 o'clock last midnight.

Without any ceremony or formality the Canadian system of parcels post was inaugurated and the first parcel forwarded to its destination. The mail bag will be used in future to convey His Royal Highness' mail to and from Government House and the postoffice here. Below the inscription is the royal coat of arms and the initials of H. R. H.

Mr. Pelletier did not wait until midnight to post the first parcel. He called at the Ottawa postoffice early in the evening, purchased the necessary stamps, affixed them to the parcel and mailed it. At midnight the Department automobile called at the postoffice, picked up a mail bag containing the parcel and carried it to Rideau Hall, where it was received by the secretary, who had been instructed to await its coming.

The officials and staff of the Ottawa postoffice mailed Madame Pelletier a beautiful bouquet of flowers—a souvenir of the inauguration of the system.

In the various postoffices of the Dominion the staffs have been busy for several months past digesting new rules and preparing for the inception of the system. The railway companies demanded something like four millions for the extra carriage, but eventually settled for an amount less than $800,000 above the present payment for carriage of the ordinary mails.

It will take some months for the system to emerge from the organization stage, but the Postmaster-General believes it will be a paying proposition.

Montreal Financier Called in Quebec Legislative Inquiry.

He Will Be Asked to Give His Version of the Opening of the Investigation Into Rumors of Graft in Provincial Legislature—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux Is Also on His Way to Give Evidence.

MONTREAL, Feb. 10.—All investigations in connection with further inquiries of the investigation committees of both Houses appointed to look into the charges made by The Montreal Daily Mail against J. O. Mousseau, Achille Bergevin and L. P. Berard were postponed until to-day on decision of the Legislative Assembly yesterday afternoon.

Important witnesses, when the enquiry is resumed, are likely to be D. Lorne McGibbon and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux. Mr. Laverne, in the lower House yesterday afternoon, requested Mr. Taschereau, chairman of the investigating committee, to summon D. Lorne McGibbon, and Mr. Taschereau promised that he would. The summoning of Hon. Mr. Rodolphe Lemieux is a direct result of the statement of C. P. K. Carpenter of Gaspe, to the effect that Mr. Lemieux had given him a letter introducing him to the promoters of the Montreal Fair Association bill. Mr. Lemieux has expressed his desire to be heard before the committee, and he will therefore be called.

On the understanding that the investigating committee of the lower House would proceed yesterday afternoon, M. E. Nichols, president and managing director of The Daily Mail, and L. T. Marechal, K.C., counsel for The Daily Mail, arrived last night. They were surprised when they heard the investigation had been postponed until to-day. B. A. McNab, editor of The Daily Mail, will arrive in Quebec to-day.

"From present indications," said Mr. Taschereau yesterday, "I should say that the main evidence is completed. Although it is impossible to state definitely, I do not think that the investigation of the lower House committee will take more than a couple of days or so." As for the presentation of the report to the House he could not be sure, but it would be before the end of the present session.

THE TO-MORROW GOVERNMENT

"Never do To-day What You Can Put off Until the Day After To-morrow" is the Borden Motto.

Precipitate haste in dealing with public questions and public business is dangerous to the welfare of any country. But danger does not lie in haste alone. There is equal danger in the other extreme. Procrastination in taking up the important public problems which press for attention must hold back and imperil national prosperity. It is this latter danger that threatens Canada to-day.

Much was expected of the new Government when Mr. Borden and his colleagues took office. Many pledges had been given to the people on its behalf. Its party friends had confidence in the ability and progressiveness of the Ministry. The Liberals were ready to suspend judgment upon the Cabinet until the new blood had been given fair opportunity of proving its worth.

That was more than two years ago. Admittedly, the welfare of the Dominion has not been endangered since then through any Government haste in dealing with public business. But it has suffered and it is still endangered by the shilly-shallying tactics and procrastination of the Premier and his Ministers.

The Ministry has won its right to the title of "The To-morrow Government." It is a Government, the first in Canada, which has one reply to every question as to action which will be taken or the policy which will be laid down in regard to important public matters. That answer is terse and well-nigh meaningless. It runs as follows: "Announcement will be made and action taken in due course."

Again and again the Government has been pressed to declare its permanent naval policy. Again and again the Government has given the same answer: "An announcement will be made in due course."

"What is the Government's tariff policy?" the Ministers are asked. "That policy will be announced in due course," comes the answer.

"What does the Government propose to do in regard to the natural resources of the three Prairie Provinces which Mr. Borden promised to hand over to the respective Provincial Governments?" The answer of the Government to this question is in effect the same as its reply to other questions: "The Government's intention will be made known in due course."

When the free wheat resolution was offered in the House a few days ago the Government complained of its introduction at that time. "The Government's policy will be announced in due time," said Hon. Mr. Rogers.

When Hon. Mr. Crothers was questioned as to whether or not the Government will act upon the report of the Technical Education Commission the familiar answer was given: "The intention of the Government will be announced in due course."

Premier Borden had the same reply to make the other day when question-intention of the Government in regard to the redemption of his pledge to take action to check electoral corruption.

In this respect, at least, the Government keeps to a consistent course. It does not deal promptly and aggressively with public problems. The public may press for action but the Government does not hasten to meet the public demand. The need for action may be clearly evident but the Ministry delays. In time it may make some move but only at its own good pleasure.

"In due course" has become the Borden motto—a wise enough motto under ordinary circumstances but a motto which is against the public interest when, as in the present case, "in due course" means indefinite delay and inaction while national problems go unsettled and national needs unsatisfied.

Canadian welfare is endangered to-day because great questions are played with by the Premier and his colleagues when the need for action is all too clear. The injury grows steadily greater at such a time as this, when, for the first time in years, Canada is experiencing financial stringency, scarcity of work for the laboring man, a slackening in development. It will continue to grow so long as "The To-morrow Government" remains in office, though influences beyond the control of the Government may bring some improvement in existing business conditions.

THE BOUNTY FARCE.

FENIAN RAID BOUNTIES GRANTED TO THOUSANDS WHO NEVER HEARD
A SHOT FIRED.

That eager and industrious propagandist of militarism in Canada, Colonel the Honorable Sam Hughes, who dismisses $11,000 expenditures of public money of officers' travelling expenses as mere "general odds and ends," buys automobiles for his gold-braided subordinates, builds armories and drill halls on every vacant lot, and organizes old country tours for officers and their ladies on a palatial scale, has developed with fine Rogersque effect a new and apparently unending method of disposing of the contents of the people's treasury.

During the parliamentary session of 1912 Colonel Hughes introduced and secured the passage of a Government bill which provided a bounty of $100 to every living veteran of the Fenian Raid strife. At that time the Government estimated that the outside estimate of all the men who had been called out for service during these sorties was at most 10,000, and it was intimated that not more than 6,000 at the very outside would still be alive and entitled to the bounty.

Parliament was informed by Colonel Hughes the other day that already 16,470 bounty payments had been made. There are as many more applications coming in—and the end is not yet in sight. It is stated that the bestowal of these bounties has been so generous that there are instances in Nova Scotia where individual alleged "veterans" have received it twice.

So scandalous has this wholesale bestowal of public money become that even the Conservative Press has raised its voice in protest. In an editorial under the caption, "The Bounty Farce," The Ottawa Journal (Conservative) of February 4 last, points out that 10,000 men altogether went to "the front" and served in what might "by courtesy" be termed actual fighting, while somewhat over 30,000 are collecting the bounty. "If the Government is willing to give a bounty to these men," declared the Conservative paper, "let's go after it. If we didn't happen to be alive at the time of the Fenian Raid it's no bar: remember if you had been, you would have been mates represents an increase of over 1½ millions as compared with the main estimates brought down last session. It will undoubtedly be followed by large supplementary estimates to be brought down by the end of the session and jammed through probably under closure late at night in order to attract as little public attention as possible.

Despite the fact that the expenditures have been nearly doubled since the Borden Government assumed office, there is no sign of retrenchment or of any economy in the handling of the people's funds, raised for the most part by tariff taxation. The tendency is all the other way. It is practically certain that the appropriation made last session totalling $202,656,163, exclusive of the special legislative grants to Mackenzie and Mann, etc., will be considerably exceeded this year. Members are now busy getting votes added for Public Works and other public expenditures for their respective constituencies.

One direct result of the "Dash away and spend" policy is an increase of $1,758,013 this year in the vote required for meeting interest charges on the national debt and sinking fund. That item alone means about one dollar per year additional taxation for every elector in Canada.

Where does the money go to? Here are just a few illuminative instances taken from the Auditor-General's report for last year which the taxpayer might ponder well.

For 300 "At Home" cards the Government paid a firm of Ottawa jewelers $20.40. The only apparent explanation of this item is to be found in the series of "At Homes" given last session in the parliamentary restaurant by "The ladies of the Cabinet."

One Packard touring car, $4,500. Said car is used by Hon. L. P. Pelletier and the officials of his department "on post-office business."

Victor E. Cantin, Quebec, 8,600 visiting cards, $107.50. Whether Mr. Cantin is busy leaving his cards on some of Mr. Pelletier's in Quebec, is not stated.

Warlike Stores, $683,079. This probably includes the bullets on which Col. Hughes feeds and thousands of yards of gold braid.

For a permanent force, $2,200,183. This is to help support the Canadian standing army guard our frontier against unimaginable attacks and provide for the settling of labor disputes by the bayonet, according to the policy adopted by the Minister of Labor on Vancouver Island last summer.

These are a few of the items that explain why the national debt is increasing and why the expenditures have grown by nearly $100,000,000 since the Borden Government assumed power.

THE COST OF "REFORM."

LAWYERS PROFIT FROM CIVIL SERVICE DECAPITATIONS.

Civil Service "reform" as interpreted by the Borden Government is decidedly profitable for the legal friends and supporters of that Government. According to the Auditor-General's report, the total cost of the investigations held last session under the Inquiries Act, mostly in connection with legal "investigations" leading to dismissals on charges of partisanship was $35,272 during the year for his services. Mr. J. G. H. Bergeon ex-M. P. for Beauharnois, one of Mr. Borden's Quebec leaders, got $4,057 during the 12 months for his services in conducting investigations in Quebec.

The larger expenditures Hughes would take as a matter of course. He expects the taxpayer of Canada to do the same. The amounts which together make enormous total he looks upon as speaks of them lightly as "occasional expenses."

Colonel Hughes in his military zeal forgets that the greater the money he flings round so much must be provided for the men of Canada, the farmers and the other day citizens of the Dominion seeks to foster the military in Canada and to further the purposes of those who are militarists like him. ### THE COST OF HIGH LIVING. ANOTHER RECORD-BREAKING BUDGET OF EXPENDITURES AND SOME SAMPLE ITEMS.

The main estimates for the coming fiscal year totalling $190,735,176, presented to Parliament last week, show continued adherence to the one Government policy on which all the elements of Mr. Borden's coalition following can unite. This is the policy bluntly enunciated by Mr. Nicholson, Conservative member for Queen's, P.E.I., and afterwards discreetly eliminated from Hansard. "Dash away and spend the money," he said. The 190 millions vote in the main esti-

THE BILLS FOR JOY-RIDING. MINISTERIAL TRAVELLING EXPENSES AND NEW PRIVATE CARS COME HIGH.

The joy-riders of the present administration believe that it is "a sweet and pleasant thing to travel for one's country." It is also a costly thing—for the country. The total amounts spent by the Ministers last fiscal year for travelling expenses was something over $30,000—to say nothing of the two new private cars purchased at a cost of over $30,000 for the use principally of the Minister of Public Works and the Minister of Militia.

According to the Auditor General's report Col. Hon. Sam Hughes' bill for travelling last fiscal year was $5,803. But that was before he had really struck his stride and before the innovation of special transcontinental military trains, and European jaunts with large parties of officers, officers' wives, private secretaries, assistant private secretaries and so forth. Premier Borden came next with a bill for $4,911 with an incidental of $100.40 for cab hire in Ottawa. Hon. Geo. E. Foster, who travels further but somewhat more economically, only charged up $4,044 for his travelling expenses. This of course does not include his trip of last summer to Australia, China, Japan, Korea, etc. Hon. J. D. Hazen spent $3,342 in travelling at the Government's expense; Hon. L. P. Pelletier, $2,947; Hon. Frank Cochrane, $1,222 and Hon. Robert Rogers put in his bill at the round sum of $1,500.

"ODDS AND ENDS." COL. HUGHES AIRILY DISMISSES INQUIRIES AS TO WHAT HE DOES WITH THE PEOPLE'S MONEY.

Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, is a warlike gentleman to whom it seems that huge expenditures for military purposes in Canada should be accepted as a matter of course. He sees no reason for comment in the fact that this year he purposes an outlay of nearly $11,000,000 for such purposes plus many hundreds of thousands of dollars for armouries and drill halls to be built by the Public Works Department.

His estimates for this year include an item of $11,000 for "Sundries," Naturally enough, and properly, when the item was before the House the other evening Opposition members pressed for a statement as to what was covered by the outlay.

"General odds and ends and for the travelling expenses of the civil officers of the department," was Colonel Hughes' reply.

The amount of the item, not inconsiderable in itself by any means, is of less importance than is the fact that Colonel Hughes saw fit to treat the

IOWA'S WALLED LAKE

Mystery in the Water and the That Surround It.

One of the curiosities of the the "Walled lake," a hundred west of Dubuque, Ia. Some three feet higher than the surrounding surface, the lake has a wall wide on the bottom and five, the top, and the wall varies in from ten to fifteen feet. The remarkable circumstance connecting this strange lake is that the used in the construction of the vary from three to 100 pounds weight and there are no stone soever in the entire country surrounding the lake for five or ten miles.

There is no record, history or legend to tell who brought them to build this wall, and to the scene more mystifying a belt of land half a mile in length completely surrounds the lake. With exception, the entire country is a prairie. The trees must have been planted about the same time it was built. In 1856 there was a storm, and the ice and the lake down a large part of the wall. Farmers living in the country obliged to repair the wall to their farms from being flooded. The curious lake covers a ground of 2,800 acres, and the water is fifty-five feet deep and as cold as ice. No one seems to be able where the water goes to or from, but it is always fresh and —C. Gilbert Percival in Health.

BOWSER, PALMIST

Our Hero Hurls Himself Into the Midst of New Adventures.

PUZZLED BY MRS. B.'S LINES.

That Good Lady's Frivolous Remarks Lead Him to Seek New Victims, Including the Cook and Then a Stranger With Disagreeable Ways.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

THE Bowser cat sat on the hearth winking and blinking. The Bowser cricket had crept under the piano to chirp. Mrs. Bowser sat reading a book. Mr. Bowser sat reading his paper and smoking.

It was as peaceful a household as could be found in the state.

Suddenly—

The cat ceased winking and blinking.

The cricket came off his chirp.

Mrs. Bowser looked up.

The cook fell down the cellar stairs with a yell.

Mr. Bowser hitched to the right—then to the left—then said:

"Must be a mighty interesting book."

"Fairly so," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"Wouldn't want to lay it aside for a few minutes' talk with me?"

"Why, of course. I was wondering what made you so quiet. How is the Mexican situation?"

"It doesn't interest me in the slightest. As a woman you spend half your time at bargain sales, but perhaps you may have read or heard of the science called palmistry?"

"Yes," she answered.

"And do you believe in it?"

"I thought you'd bring home a new fad soon. So you have turned to palmistry?"

The Customary Abuse.

"There you go, woman! If I was to bring home a gospel hymn book found in the road you'd call it a fad. It's

TORONTO WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Bearing Down Pains, Backache and Pain in Side by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Toronto, Ont. — "Last October, I wrote to you for advice as I was completely run down, had bearing down sensation in the lower part of bowels, backache, and pain in the side. I also suffered terribly from gas. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now entirely free from pain in back and bowels and am stronger in every way. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound highly to all expectant mothers."

—Mrs. E. WANDBY, 92—Logan Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

this kitchen with your nonsense I'll pack me trunk and be off in the morning!"

"But, my dear woman, this is palmistry," he mildly protested. "Nature has engraved certain lines on your palm as an index."

Not to Be Trifled With.

"I am no index, sir, and if you are not satisfied with my cooking I'll go! All the lines on me palm come from rubbing the washboard and pounding the matron, and that's all there is to it. Am I to go?"

Mr. Bowser went instead. He was piqued and chagrined at his failure, and the sight of a half suppressed smile on Mrs. Bowser's face set his ears to working.

Mrs. Bowser discreetly held her tongue, and the cat took a walk under the piano and toned down her purr. For five minutes Mr. Bowser paraded up and down and then marched down the hall, clapped his hat on his head and passed out on the steps. He was just in time to meet a person ascending, and the person saluted him with:

"Could you help a man with a dying wife and six starving children?"

"Have you ever heard about palmistry?" asked Mr. Bowser in reply.

"A MIGHTY SINGULAR THING."

ESKIMO HOSPITALITY.

A Dinner Drama That Illustrates a Trait of the Natives.

A custom of the Eskimos, which illustrates in a striking manner the character of the people, is thus described by Dr. S. K. Hutton in his work, "Among the Eskimos of Labrador:"

"It was a queer dinner party. The table was pushed into the corner and littered as usual with clothes and books and relics of work hastily laid aside. Dinner was spread on the floor. The center of the feast was an enormous pot, braced with lumps and slabs and ribs and joints of raw seal meat. Round the pot the family squatted, every one except the baby, armed with a businesslike knife. Cutting off pieces of flesh or gnawing at bones, they munched and chewed and smacked their lips with great relish.

"So busy were they all that perhaps I was the only one to notice a slow, shuffling step passing the window. The footsteps turned into the porch, and I heard the dogs yelping as somebody cleared them out of the way. A groping hand felt for the latch, and the door their lips with great relish.

"So busy were they all that perhaps
I was the only one to notice a slow, shuffling step passing the window. The footsteps turned into the porch, and I heard the dogs yelping as somebody cleared them out of the way. A groping hand felt for the latch, and the door
silently opened. A voice said, 'Aksuse'
—'Be strong, all of you'—and Apkik, a young man of the village, came in,
choking and coughing at the sudden warmth. Nobody seemed to take much notice, but John gave a laconic 'Ah'
in answer to his greeting, and the circle widened to make room for the newcomer.

"Apkik sat down and pulled a knife
out of his belt. I watched him pityingly as he helped himself with lean and shaking fingers. It was not long before he was satisfied, for he was sadly listless and weary, and with a simple 'Nakomek' he wiped his knife upon his trousers leg and slowly went out. Again nobody took much notice.
John said 'Ah' and Apkik shut the door after him.

"I was mystified by this strange little drama, and I suppose that I showed my wonder in my face, for John answered the question that was in my thoughts, just as if I had asked it.

"We all know Apkik," he said. 'He is a poor young man who cannot hunt or work for himself, and we know that he cannot work because he is ill. I did not invite him to come, but he is quite welcome. No poor man lacks for a meal as long as there is food. It is a custom of the people.'"

Triumph of a Sausage.

Westphalia, in Prussia, is the home of the sausage. There, it is said, a trader will name no fewer than 400 different kinds of sausage. A sausage exhibition was held recently in Germany, at which 1,000 varieties of sausage were shown.

In this connection the story is told of a young Prussian who, though he had received an expensive training as a chemist, shut himself up in his laboratory and instead of devising a new dye, safety match, motor engine, explosive, aeroplane or photographic lens took pork, veal, olives, pepper,
fennel, old wine, cheese, apples, cinnamon and herrings' roes and from them evolved a wonderful and totally original "wurst," the best of its kind. He has amassed a considerable fortune
from its sale.—Berlin Cor. New York Sun.

Icebergs.

The greatest distance at which an iceberg can be observed in clear weather by day is eighteen miles. The average berg on an ordinary clear day
can be sighted from thirteen to sixteen miles from the ship; on a cloudy day from eleven to fourteen miles. In a slight fog bergs can be sighted at two miles; in a dense fog at 200 yards. In bright moonlight they can be seen at two and one-half miles with the naked eye; in starlight at one mile, and at two miles distance with glasses. On a night overcast and dark, but with the horizon visible, bergs can be seen at a distance of one-half mile with glasses.

"A MIGHTY SINGULAR THING."

mighty singular that I can't move without you twitting and taunting me
with being a half idiot!"

"Well, what is it about palmistry?"
she asked.

"I had my palm read about a week ago, and the palmist told things so straight that I got him to give me a few lessons. As far as I know, you never had your palm read."

"And I don't think I ever will. It's too much like fortune telling."

"But just let me take your hand
and look at what they call the life line. I want to see whether you are to live to a good old age or not."

Mrs. Bowser complied, and after a moment's study he scratched his head
and muttered:

"Well, that's a mighty singular thing,
and I can't account for it. You are going to live to be at least ninety years old!"

"Yes, I hope to."

"And according to my life line so am I."

"All the better."

"But according to that crisscross line there you are to be a widow before you are forty."

"Well?"

"And according to my crisscross line I'm to be a widower before I'm fifty."
"Then it seems that there's something out of gear with the crisscross.
You'd better look at the lines on the soles of your feet and see if they won't help you out."

An Unavailing Soft Answer.

"Woman, remember who you are talking to!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he flushed up and flung her hand away.

"But you have got such silly notions into your head! Let us drop palmistry this evening and have a game of cards or run into Green's. I didn't mean to hurt your feelings.
Here—look at my hand again if you wish."

"But I do not wish," he stiffly replied. "There are some folks so blunded mean that their palms tell nothing more than a gridiron would. I took up palmistry for a diversion, and I propose to carry it along in spite of your would be sarcasm. I'll go down and read the cook's future for her."

The cook felt it her duty to hold out her hand as requested, and after a look at it Mr. Bowser sagely said:

"This line here indicates a short life and a violent death. This other line indicates a lack of ambition. This line tells me that you will never marry.
This other line indicates that you—"

"That's enough, sir!" she said as she pulled her hand away. "Do you see that line there? Well, that indicates that if you are to come fooling around

Cleanse the System

"Could you help a man with a dying
wife and six starving children?"

"Have you ever heard about palmistry?" queried Mr. Bowser, in reply,
after a minute.

"I have, sir. It's the lines in your hands."

"Then I'm glad to meet you. Have you had your hand read?"

"I have, sir, and not half an hour ago. That's why I came here. I was told that you'd give me a quarter."

"But that isn't palmistry."

"The straightest kind, sir. It's right there in one of the lines that you'd give me a quarter and perhaps an old suit of clothes."

"Then they lied to you. I'm not giving quarters to tramps. I've seen you hanging around this street for a year."
"No, I'll get nothing from you?"

"Oh, sir."

Unexpected Developments.

"Then I'll tell you of another line in my hand. The feller who read it said I'd bump up against the meanest old skintint in town before my good luck
came, and I've bumped!"

"What, what! You clear out of this!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he grabbed the man by the collar.

"Yes, sir, and the next line indicates that I'm a peaceful man till I'm aroused, but that when anybody takes me by the collar!"

"You won't go, eh?" shouted Mr.
Bowser as they mixed it up.

Five minutes later Mrs. Bowser and the cat went to the door to look out.
Mr. Bowser sat there bareheaded, with a handkerchief to his left eye, and at the bottom of the steps an old goat that had wandered into the yard was eating up his hat.

Mr. Bowser softly dabbed the handkerchief against his aching optic and heaved a sigh, and the stars twinkled,
the big white moon looked down in gentleness, and Mrs. Bowser slid into the house and hunted up the arnica and a bundle of soft rags.

BEAT THE GAS METER.

It Was a Cold Swindle, and the Company Paid For the Secret.

The most adroit scheme yet reported to beat the gas meter and get gas for nothing was discovered in Honolulu, and its success was due to the use of a modern scientific laboratory apparatus. The customer was supplied with gas coming through a common quarter in the slot meter, a quarter dropped into the meter supplying gas to the burners until a quarter's worth of the illuminant has been used, when the flames

Iroquois vs. Napanee.

At the skating rink on Monday night the Napanee seniors emerged victorious over the Iroquois Club of Kingston by the score of 8-7. At that Napanee had by far the better of the play but their forwards were very weak in their shooting and missed several good opportunities to score. The game opened comparatively fast and Napanee were first to score, Soby doing the trick on a neat play. Soby again scored on a combination play with Vanalstine and Fellows. Kingston secured their first tally on a shot from right wing. After a few moments play they evened the score on a pretty rush up centre ice. Schermehorn put his team ahead just before the half time bell sounded, making the score 3-2 in favor of Napanee. After the rest period Napanee proceeded to make a runaway of it and scored three goals in quick succession. But they did not hold the advantage for long as Kingston came strong and evened up the score. Napanee again forged ahead and Kingston again evened it up. With but five minutes to play Napanee threw their defence up on the line and McLaughlin broke the tie by scoring on a side shot. The full time whistle ended with score 8-7 favor of Napanee. Mr. Cameron Lee refereed. A regrettable accident occurred in the first half. J. Kane, goal tender for Kingston, was struck on the nose with the puck and had to be carried from the ice. The puck struck on the nose and broke it in two places. He was taken to Dr. Campbell's office where he was patched up and left for Kingston at 10 o'clock. He is at present in the Hotel Dieu and is doing nicely. Carl Vanalstine made his first appearance in a senior game and made good. He was fast and aggressive and had a wicked wing shot. Soby also played a fast game and played his position nicely. The game was rough, the players of both teams doing a lot of slashing and hooking, which could have been nipped in the bud had the referee been more strict. Only a fair crowd witnessed the game, which was a good exhibition of hockey.

DESCENDED TO ROYALTY.

Lament of Bernadotte, Who Was Once a Marshal of France.

Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's marshals and king of Sweden and Norway, was born at Pau, France, on Jan. 26, 1764, and died in Stockholm on March 8, 1844. He was the son of a lawyer and was educated for that profession. In 1780 he enlisted in the Royal marines and subsequently took part and achieved historic distinction in the French revolution. He worked his way up until he became one of Napoleon's marshals, and he ended by being not only the ruler, but the popular sovereign, of Sweden, whose language he really never mastered. With extreme intelligence and in this imitating Napoleon himself he surrounded himself with a kind of royal medieval atmosphere.

He always remained a Frenchman at heart, and though he soon ceased to be on even friendly terms with the man to whom he owed everything, the news of Napoleon's overthrow at Waterloo filled him with grief. He was then still only Prince of Sweden and did not proclaim himself king until February of 1818, when Louis XVIII. actually found himself compelled to send an envoy to bear his congratulations to a brother sovereign who had begun life as one of the humblest subjects of Louis XVI. He lived long

THE FEVERISH BEE.

Gets Hot and Worried and Works Itself to Death

Everyone who has been stung by a bee knows the burning sensation that accompanies the sting.

This is of course due to the fact that is injected by the little insect in the bee's tail. But the sting has led to a number of such as "the hot end of the tail" and so on.

It now appears, however, that a bee actually is hot. The fever which it works sometimes develops into a temperature so great that it partly cooks the honey in the hive and to actually bake the bees themselves. Bee raisers only recently found that this reason for the wiping out of their colonies instead of, as been supposed, the presence of unidentified bacilli.

We speak of people getting a fever over their work or and it is true that both the bees raise the temperature of their hives. But no human being ever into such a fever over either work or cook himself to death. The bees really do.

The dominant, all consuming desire of the worker bee is to follow out this impulse to die. A bee will literally work itself to death. That, in fact, all of them die except those destroyed by disease of the bees and the ants are the highly specialized creatures of the world.

It appears now that this specialized breeding of individuals with a single dominant idea attended by dangers that call for a lesson to man.

The concentration of energy on one task is so great that the bee is busy every moment of its life. Suddenly there comes a time when the energy output work. Then up goes the temperature of the insect and it begins to sweat. In the same way, tasks are impeded the bee. The unused work energy stored up more and more, hotter grows the bee until of its own fever. The curious thing is that one bee can apparently infect a whole colony with its temperature, and the community burns itself up.

At BOYLE & SON'S

nothing was discovered in the apparatus,
and its success was due to the use of a modern scientific laboratory apparatus.
The customer was supplied with gas coming through a common quarter in the slot meter, a quarter dropped into the meter supplying gas to the burners
until a quarter's worth of the illuminanant has been used, when the flames begin to die out and warn the customer that another quarter is required.
The collectors for the Honolulu company regularly opened this meter to take out the expected quarters, but they never found any. A watch kept on the house showed that gas was being used every night. The customer explained it by saying that he was using gas as he had done for years,
but that he did not drop any quarters
in the slot because the gas kept coming without them. A new meter was put in, but the next collection trip did not bring any quarters, nor were there slugs or any other substitutes found in the meter. Every few days then a newly tested meter was put in, but the customer continued to use gas, and the company found no quarters.

At last the company surrendered and offered to pay the customer a sum of money if he would tell his scheme, promising not to prosecute. He agreed and took the inspectors to his little laboratory. First he showed a little mold to cast disks about the size of quarters. In this he poured water, and then in a few seconds, by means of an ether spray freezing machine, such as is in common use in science, he froze
the water. Thus he had an ice disk
the size of a quarter. This was dropped into the meter slot, and the gas came.

The ice melted inside of the meter,
and the few drops of water quickly
ran out, leaving no trace of his trick.—

HORSEPOWER.

Origin of the Term as Applied to the Steam Engine.

Among many engineers there arises
discussion as to the incidents surrounding the origination of the term horsepower as applied to the steam engine.
The following quotation from "Farey on the Steam Engine," published in 1827, will be welcomed by many:

"The machinery in the great breweries and distilleries in London was then moved by the strength of horses, and the proprietors of those establishments who were first to require Mr. Watt's engines always inquired what number of horses an intended engine would be equal to.

"In consequence Mr. Watt made some experiments on the strong horses
employed by the brewers in London
and found that a horse of that kind,
walking at the rate of two and one-half miles an hour, could draw 150 pounds avoirdupois by means of a rope passing over a pulley, so as to raise up that weight, with a vertical motion, at the rate of 220 feet per minute. This exertion of mechanical power is equal to 33,000 pounds (or 528 cubic feet) of water raised vertically through a space of one foot per minute, and he denominated it a horsepower, to serve for a measure of the power exerted by his steam engines."

This estimate is much beyond the capacity of the average strong horse.
Smeaton and other early engineers estimated that 22,000 pounds per minute
was more accurate.—Power.

then still only Prince of Sweden and did not proclaim himself king until February of 1818, when Louis XVIII.
actually found himself compelled to send an envoy to bear his congratulations to a brother sovereign who had begin life as one of the humblest subjects of Louis XVI. He lived long enough to see Napoleon's remains taken to Paris from St. Helena. Commenting on this, he exclaimed:

"To think that I was once a marshal of France and that now I am only king of Sweden!"

Rubber as a Plaything.

The world owes something more tangible than improved health to its ball games, for it was its suitability as a plaything that first led to the use of india rubber. One of Columbus' companions recorded how the natives of Haiti played games with balls "made of the gum of a tree" centuries before the plant and its possibilities were known in Europe. The Spaniards in Mexico, however, used it at an early date to waterproof their cloaks. In view of the present wide utility of rubber it is interesting to note that it made its first appearance in England
as a curiosity for erasing pencil marks.

It appears, however, that the

MAD MULLAH'S RIFLES

WHERE DOES MOSLEM FANATIC
GET HIS ARMS?

Some of the Weapons Which Were Used In the Cutting Up of the Camel Corps In Somaliland Were
by Irony of Fate Secured From Britain Herself—Abyssinia Is Mostly to Blame.

The disaster to the British Camel Corps last August in Somaliland, led to the sending of the special representative of an English newspaper to that country, to endeavor to solve the mystery how the Mad Mullah obtains arms and ammunition.

It is a well-known fact that some guns were obtained from the British Government itself; indirectly of course. When the troops were withdrawn from the Soudan, rifles and cartridges were distributed to the friendly tribes so that they might protect themselves against the Mad Mullah's hosts. The ammunition was generally expended in inter-tribal feuds, then, when ammunition gave out, the rifles were given to the Mulla-
h in the hope of buying him off.
Having thus secured a large number of these rifles, the Mullah had little difficulty in taking the rest by force.

Still, this present from the British Government was not large enough to explain how it is that his men are,
and always have been, liberally supplied with rifles. Africa is rigorously closed to the gun traffic. The giving or selling of firearms (even gas-pipe guns) to the natives of practically every portion of that great continent is rightly looked on as a most heinous offence, and the offender is liable to very heavy punishment indeed.

England cannot afford to let the natives of the Soudan, East or Central Africa get possession of firearms.
Neither can France permit it in Morocco, Northern Africa, or the Sahara, and both countries spend much money in the prevention of gun-running.

Yet rifles and cartridges circulate freely in the heart of Africa, and there is no doubt whence they come.

The Mad Mullah will never run
short of arms as long as the existence of an arms factory is permitted at Addis Abeba.

Abyssinia, a ridiculous and quite irresponsible black state, is being allowed to sow the seed of endless trouble in the Soudan, in Central Africa, and in East Africa. The harvest is for England to reap, and already we have had a foretaste of it in the troubles with the Mullah. From the Addis Abeba factory rifles are distributed as far as the Congo, the Western Sahara, and Portuguese East Africa.

The people of Abyssinia do not at first sight impress one with their worthiness to be allowed any liberty
in the dangerous matter of the arms
traffic.

They are accorded the right to govern their own country simply because France, Italy, and England have almost equal interests in it, and cannot decide how to divide it equally. The Abyssinian looks on Europeans, notably Italians and English, as miserable scum. His own ideas of civilization are pretty well shown in the Custom Houses there.

SATAN'S GREAT LIE WHAT HARM IT DID

Pastor Russell, Quoting Jesus, Says Satan Is Father of Lies.

The First Lie—Where It Was Told—

Why It Was Told—To Whom It Was Told—Its Result—Its Repetition—The Disastrous Results to Humanity—All Manner of Crimes Are Its Fruitage.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Reading, Pa.,
Feb. 8.—Pastor
Russell to-day
called attention to the fact that the Bible teaching respecting Satan was been seriously departed from by Christians. Nothing
in it supports
the thought that Satan is far away, superintending
the torture of humanity, or that he has cloven hoofs, forked tail, horns, etc. On the contrary, the Bible describes him as originally one of God's noblest creatures—a "cherub."

"Since his fall, Satan's residence is in our atmosphere—Tartarus. He is "the prince of the power of the air * * * that now worketh in the children of disobedience," presenting himself as "an angel of light"—a servant of God. St. Paul speaks of "the wiles of the Adversary."

When and How Satan Fell.

The Pastor stated that the Bible explicitly declares Satan's sin to be pride and improper ambition. Seeking to usurp Divine prerogatives, he ensnared himself and rebelled against God. His ambition found no opportunity for exercise until man's creation. Then, beholding this human pair, he perceived that to capture them would be to capture a race, and to achieve in this earth his ambitious plans.

Satan took advantage of the test of loyalty which God put upon our first parents. Obsessing the serpent, he guided it continually to eat of the forbidden tree. The serpent not only did not die, but was the wisest of beasts, thus seemingly giving the lie to God's statement, "Thou shalt surely die." The Pastor thinks it unnecessary to suppose that the serpent spoke audibly. Actions can speak.

Eve was convinced that the Divine Law was selfish, and that the for-bidden fruit was desirable, to make her wise. St. Paul explains that Adam was not deceived. Realizing that his beloved wife would die, he preferred to die with her. Hence he became a wilful sinner. Presently God drove our first parents from Eden, that thus His death sentence
might be executed upon them.

Satan Adopted Another Plan.

Disappointed in that humanity
were perishing, Satan formed an-

Abyssinian looks on Europeans, notably Italians and English, as miserable scum. His own ideas of civilization are pretty well shown in the Custom Houses there.

An ink-black savage, using an eight-foot spear as a walking-stick, picking his teeth with a bamboo splinter, and having brass rings in these ears and tin ones on his toes, does not strike one as an authorized customs officer. But he is in Abyssinia!

He will claim and exercise the right to empty your portmanteau into the dust, paw your underlinen with indescribably filthy fingers, and exact practically any duty he may please on any article that takes his fancy. He will detain your baggage for as long as a fortnight in the hope of getting a bribe, and he will steal therefrom anything that it is possible to steal.

I give this genuinely faithful picture of one of the institutions of civilized Abyssinia, says Mr. Alan Ostler, the special representative referred to, so as to show that people of this type are hardly the kind to be allowed an arms factory.

It may be said that they do not yet actually make new rifles. That is merely a quibble. They repair old or damaged rifles ostensibly for the use of the Abyssinian police. This is done under the direction of an Englishman. There is no suggestion that his part in the business covers anything beyond the supervision of mechanical details, such as refitting locks and lock-bolts, adjusting damaged triggers, and so forth. But when the repairs are executed, the rifles, instead of being distributed among the soldiery, are sold to buyers. Then a fresh supply of old discarded rifles is bought "for the soldiery," and the profitable business is repeated.

There is no doubt that many of the best of these rifles find their way into the hands of the Mullah's men. I am also told by Somalis that on at least one occasion the Mullah having sent a deputation with presents to the Abyssinian Governor of Harrar—a son of Ras Makonnen—received in return a rich gift of cartridges and guns. And in this, and other ways, the Empire's enemies obtain the wherewithal to continue the acts of lawlessness, which frequently cost so much in treasure and blood.

Napoleon's St. Helena Home.

Napoleon's last home on the island of St. Helena is in a deplorable condition. The doors are open night and day. All the rooms are empty, save the one in which the exiled emperor breathed his last. This contains a small altar and a bust of the conqueror of Europe. The historic house is going to rack and ruin. Longwood and the surrounding grounds, including the first tomb of Napoleon, were purchased from the British government by Napoleon III in 1858. The French government still pays a caretaker, but no funds for upkeep are provided.

other plan. He would cope with God by injecting new life into the human race. He would have an empire, despite the Divine will.

To do this, he proposed to the angels that they materialize and live as men—contrary to their nature. To those who objected that this might displease God, Satan presented the argument that if God really possessed the power, He would have punished him, for he had been an enemy of God for some time. The argument was successful, according to the Bible.

For centuries a process of engrafting angelic vitality upon Adamic stock progressed. We read, "The sons of God beheld the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all they chose." We read that their children were "giants, men of renown." But they bore no stamp of Divine character. They were brutal, sensual, devilish.

The children of Adam became the slaves of these giants. Thus the Scriptures tell us that the earth was filled with violence, and men's thoughts were evil continually. Apparently Noah and his family remained pure Adamic stock. Then came the Deluge, already prepared for in the Divine Plan, and all mankind perished, except Noah and his family.

Satan's Lie Otherwise Supported.

Thwarted again, Satan began a new system of tactics—to persuade mankind that his original lie was truth—that those who seem to die really become more alive. To assist in this deception, he had the support of the fallen angels, sentenced with himself to remain in Tartarus—the atmosphere.

Necromancers, witches and wizards were developed. The fallen angels, speaking through these mediums, personated the dead. Gradually, this system of error spread, until no nation can be found where these evil spirits, have not supported Satan's lie. Even amongst Christians, Satan's word is accepted, and God's Word rejected—"The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "The wages of sin is death."

The Foundation of All Errors.

Pastor Russell declared that nearly all theological errors are based upon this doctrine of demons—that men do not really die. Where, he asked, would be the doctrines of eternal torment, purgatory, masses for the dead, etc., if people really believed God's Word that the dead are dead, and that their only hope lies in the resurrection, secured for them by Jesus' death.

The speaker believes that mediums, who to-day support Satan's lie, are themselves deceived. His pamphlet on Spiritism has recovered many honest mediums, who after learning that they were agents of Satan and his demons, have become consecrated children of God.

ONTARIO POLITICS

Mr. N. W. Rowell and the Liberal party in Ontario are giving more and more attention to the agricultural situation in the Province and it is evident that they consider it one of the most pressing problems of the day.

At Woodstock on February 6th, Mr. Rowell laid special emphasis on the question of rural life. He pointed out the serious situation arising from the decline in rural population in Old Ontario, and showed that it affected all branches of life including the school and the church.

Mr. Rowell referred to the agricultural commission in 1881 by the government of Sir Oliver Mowat to investigate rural condition in Ontario.

"That investigation," declared Mr. Rowell, "started a new era in the agricultural development of Ontario. More than thirty years have passed since then and the time has now come when we should have another stock-taking and a thorough agricultural survey. Let us get at the facts."

Mr. Rowell referred to the Opposition's proposal at the last Session of the Legislature that the government should appoint a thorough, independent and non-partisan commission, and pointed out that the Government had refused. The Leader of the Opposition promised that the resolution would be re-introduced this year.

Mr. Rowell took up a number of questions of interest to the rural communities, including farm labor, good roads, extension of the Hydro Electric to the farmers, radial railways, co-operation and agricultural education.

A TROLLEY IN THE DESERT.

Sand Fights the Wires From Cairo to the Pyramids.

Extending from Cairo to the pyramids of Gizeh is an electric trolley line which is used chiefly by tourists. The trunks of huge palm trees serve as trolley poles to support the overhead conductor, and the contrast between the modern hurrying motorcars and the peaceful centuries old tombs of the pharaohs holds the interest of many a contemplative traveler.

At one side of the trolley conductor on bell shaped insulators are run the feeders, which, like the trolley wire, are of bright, hard drawn copper.

After these wires had been installed it was soon found that they invariably broke and fell within six or seven months, the cross section being much reduced at the point of fracture.

Investigation showed that the desert winds which sweep across the right of way whip sand particles against the wires, causing a filing action which cuts away the copper much like an artificial sand blast. The glass globes of arc lamps installed along the road have exhibited the same destructive action.

A similar effect is observed with the incandescent units used to light the way to the sphinx. These strings of lamps, besides having to be moved at frequent intervals to accommodate the varying level of the shifting sands, are rapidly eaten away by the etching action of the desert winds. Thus far no remedy has been discovered for this destruction except frequent renewals. —Electrical World.

Quick of Wit and Full of Resources in Time of Danger.

DARING IN EVADING CAPTIVITY

Ingenious Schemes Used by Burglars, When Detected in the Act of Robbery, to Baffle Their Pursuers and Escape the Clutches of the Law.

The wise burglar considers not only how he may enter, but also how he may escape. He has the whole planned out before embarking on his venture, and nothing is left to chance.

When he is at work in a room he usually locks the door on the inside. If there is no lock he simply pushes the chair with its back hard up against the door handle, thus making it quite impossible for any one to come in without him unexpectedly.

Sometimes his ordinary precautions fail, and he is driven to take other measures at the spur of the moment. These are often the most extraordinary expedients and may end in doing serious damage to life and property.

An instance in point occurred long ago at Hopwood, near Reading. A tradesman's wife was alone in her house at night when she was startled by a creaking sound. Opening her eyes, she saw a rough looking man in the room. Evidently he knew her, for he tiptoed to a chest of drawers and took out a small case which held a sum of about $75. The great presence of mind of the lady prevented her from screaming. She waited until the man was out of the room, then sprang up and hastily put on her dressing gown.

Then she ran out, but on gaining the top of the stairs was met by a man of flame. The thief, who had evidently heard her get out of bed, had seized up a pile of newspapers in the passage below and, heaping them on the stairs, set fire to them.

It was impossible to pass the fire, and, though fortunately it came in time to put the flames of the burglar got clean away.

Even more cunning was the case of a thief who raided a house on Westminster street, London. The tenant, hearing noise outside his bedroom door, opened it and discovered that his key and chain were missing. Without hesitating to put on slippers, he bolted the door and was just in time to stop the thief rush out of the front door. The thief glanced back and saw that his pursuer was barefooted and, taking a bottle from his pocket, flung it forcibly down upon the thief's head in front of the other.

The householder naturally put on his slippers, just in time to save his own while the burglar, turning sideways down a side alley, disappeared from view.

The latter case calls to mind a similar incident which happened in Devonport or, in Stoke, which is the residence of a suburb of that town. A naval officer was aroused about 3 a. m. on a morning by hearing a slight creaking sound downstairs. He picked up a candle and went down and located the

NOISELESS NOISE.

Ring a Bell in a Vacuum and You Cannot Hear the Sound.

The value of air as a noise and sound medium can readily be ascertained by suspending a bell from a silk strand through the neck of a large bottle from which the air has been pumped. By pulling on the silk the tongue can be seen to strike the sides of the bell, but no sound is heard. A bell suspended by a metal rod and rung would be audible, the sound waves being carried to the outside of the bottle by the metal rod. An experiment of this kind, using an iron vessel as a substitute for the glass bottle, would be found not nearly so satisfactory, though the bell be suspended from silk as in the former instance, owing almost entirely to the fact that iron is more porous than glass, consequently containing some air, which would convey an almost imperceptible sound to the outside.

There is said to exist in Scotland a stone so opaque as to render inaudible
even the firing of a cannon, if one crouches on the opposite side. All liquids and gases are excellent sound conductors; especially is water on the surface, and certain kinds of wood.

If it was possible for two men to live a sufficient length of time in a glass box hermetically sealed and containing no air they would be unable to converse, though using the greatest powers at their command.—Chica-

GIVE THAT PUNY CHILD THIS GUARANTEED REMEDY.

If your child is under-weight, listless
ailing, liable to get sick easily, it needs
a medicine to build its weight and strength. For this purpose there is nothing else we know of that we can so strongly endorse as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. The remarkable success of this splendid medicine is due to the fact that it contains ingredients
that tone the nerves, enrich the blood and furnish to the entire system the strength, weight and health-building substances it needs. And, it does all this without injuring the stomach. In fact, Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is not only pleasant to take, but even the most sensitive stomach is benefited by it, and the digestion improved. On the other hand, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs, which most parents object to giving their children.
It does its good work by taking hold of the weakness and builds the body
up to its natural strength, at the same time making it strong to resist disease.

If Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion doesn't build your child up, feed the stunted puny muscles, and make the little one lively, strong and well, and full of the animal spirits children are meant to have, come back and tell us and get your money back. We don't want you to lose a cent. We think this is no more than fair, and it leaves you no cause to hesitate. For old people also —for convalescents—for all who are nervous, tired-out, run-down, no mat-

Olive Oil Emulsion with the same guarantee of entire satisfaction or

PUZZLES TO SCIENCE.

Familiar Problems That Man's Mighty Brain Cannot Solve.

There are many familiar things that puzzle science. Here are some of the problems that are unsolved riddles to the scientific sharps:

What sleep is.
How an eye sees.
What electricity is.
How a firefly lights its lamp.
How a seed grows into a tree.
How a rose makes its perfume.
Whence the sun gets its heat.
Why the compass points to the north.
What makes a bird build its first nest.

What causes the sex of a baby or an animal.

What happens when food is oxidized
in the system.

What change takes place in iron
when it is magnetized.

What makes rain fall in some places
and not in others.

How a bloodhound tracks a man by the smell of his footprints.

What makes an apple fall to the ground and not fly off in the air.

How a bird can fly in the dark through a forest without hitting the trees.

How glands that are identical in structure secrete absolutely different fluids.

Why iron alone, and iron only in particular states, is capable of being magnetized.

What happens when two volumes of hydrogen and one of oxygen are combined to form water.

SHORT CHANGE GRAFT.

An "Honest" Industry That Does Big Business in New York.

"One form of honest graft a hotel keeper has to fight the hardest in this town is 'accidental short changing,'" said the manager of a very popular hotel near the Grand Central depot, famous for its oyster bar.

"The same sort of 'honest graft' obtains at almost every cash changing place in the city where there is a netting on the cashier's desk to protect the cash and a lower bar of wood to hold up the netting or glass screen.
This bar of wood or metal runs across the hand hole for change. The cashiers have figured out the angle of vision of all men, short and tall, and the distance they stand from the desk to receive their change.

"Say a dollar is changed to take out 30 cents. The 'accidental short change' artist will push forward the 70 cents
in coin, but his hand will halt one dime that is hidden from the angle of vision of the man getting change by the line of the bar over the cash hand hole. If the man is in a hurry or ab-sentminded he grabs the change he sees and rushes off without one dime.
Always stop, stoop and look if in doubt.

"And you would be surprised to know how much money is left on cashiers' counters, box offices, subway ticket booths and other places. I'll wager $100,000 is short changed annually in New York. They never call you back."

A Romance of Finance.

The present high value of shares in the New River company—opened just 300 years ago—formed one of the most romantic stories in the history of finance. James I. advanced Hugh Myddelton part of the capital for his project in consideration of an allotment of one-half the shares—which numbered seventy-two. For twenty-five years no dividends were paid, and the shares—
"kings" and "adventurers" alike—
were worth £5 apiece, and Charles I. thought he had done well when he induced the company to take over his holding in consideration of a fixed settlement of £500 a year. Twenty years ago an undivided "adventurer's" share was sold in the open market for £94,900.—London Chronicle.

Nature and the Barnacle.

In the barnacle we have a unique and wonderful case of a creature that can afford as age comes on to dispense with the eyesight that was so useful in youth. For the young and old barnacle are as different one from the other as fishes from seaweed. In the heyday of life the barnacle swims about the sea, seeking its food with the aid of its eyes and generally leading a roaming existence. Later in life, however, it grows tired of this aimless
wandering and settles down to worry ships' captains by attaching itself to the keels of their craft and defying the much advertised powers of various preventive paints. Once, then, the barnacle has become a fixture, whether on ships or sbarks, its eyesight is of no more use. It cannot seek its food, and it cannot shun its foes, for it never more will move. Therefore its eyes become superfluous and, according to nature's invariable rule in such cases, disappear.

THE ISLAND OF THE STAIRS

Being a True Account of Certain Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Master John Hampdon, Seaman, and Mistress Lucy Wilberforce, Gentlewoman, In the Great South Seas.

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Copyright, 1912, by Cyrus Townsend Brady

But as it was full morning now I decided that first of all the creature comforts had to be thought of. I offered to relinquish the tiller and prepare something to eat, but Mistress Lucy took that upon herself. What we had was cold, but there was plenty of it, and at my urging she ate heartily. For myself I needed no stimulus but my raging hunger. I wanted her to be in fettle for whatever might happen.

We had not much conversation the while, but I do remember that she did say she had rather be here alone with me than on the ship, whereat my heart pounded, but I had sense enough to say nothing. Her loneliness and helplessness appealed to me. I might have been held under other circumstances, but not now.

Well, we coasted along that barrier reef a good part of the morning until we reached the other end of the island and discovered to our dismay that there was absolutely no opening, no break in it through which we could make our way. When we reached the lower end my lady was for sailing around on the other side, but this I did not dare. We had heard nothing from the ship or her boats, and I didn't propose to arouse any pursuit by coming within possible range of her glasses. I did not know where the Rose of Devon lay.

"Madam," said I at last, "there is naught for us but to try to go over the reef in some fashion. As I examined the island yesterday through the glasses I couldn't see any opening in the reef on that side, and, although I never saw or heard of a case like this before, I make no doubt but what the reef is continuous and there is no recess to the island except over it. And of yonder wall it must be by stairs of some sort."

"It would not be difficult to climb it," I assented, "for a man, that is, save for one thing."

"And what is that?"

"These pinnacles of rock are as sharp as needles. It would be like climbing broken glass. The climber would be cut to pieces before he had gone half way."

"Then if we find no stairs we are in a bad fix," she said thoughtfully, examining the towering wall.

"There must be stairs," I answered. "There must be a way. The latitude and longitude agree with your ancestor's description and I make no doubt we shall chance upon them."

So we tramped along, searching the shore and sea and finding nothing. After perhaps an hour's monotonous going, when we had traversed about a third of the distance of the island, we rounded a projection of the cliff and there before us rose the stairs!

What we saw was a gigantic stairway, irregular, but made of huge blocks of rough hewn stone, not coral rock, but harder stone of firmer texture, like granite almost. I was not familiar with the stone either. There was no symmetry about it, some of the stones rose perhaps three feet and others not more than as many inches, but stairs they certainly were and they surely had been made by man, and the stones were most carefully fitted, being laid up without mortar, the surfaces so close that I could scarce thrust a knife blade between. The huge blocks were of monstrous size, too, much too great in bulk and weight to be handled by any primitive mechanical means. I thought I never could conceive how natives or primitive men could have shaped them, moved them and finally laid them up in the form of stairs.

Nor did the stairs alone awaken our amazement and quicken our curiosity. They ended in a circling belt of sand, here a little wider than elsewhere. At the bottom on either side, two gigantic statues or busts of stone had been erected. Their bases were buried in the sand, and they rose to quite twice my height above and I am good six feet and more tall. These stones were carved into the rough yet not unreal likenesses of human faces.

Why we had not discovered these stairs from seaward was because they didn't come squarely down to the water's edge at right angles to the wall, but lay, as it were, parallel to a niche within the wall so that they were somewhat sheltered from observation from the sea.

We broke upon them suddenly, therefore. Mistress Lucy clutched my arm.

"The giant stairway!" she cried in amazement.

"It is indeed," I said, "just as it was set forth in the parchment."

"And the great stone faces," she added in a voice in which there was a touch of awe.

"Let us go nearer and ascend the stairs," I said, taking her hand and leading the way, and she was so preoccupied that she did not notice.

I observed as we approached the stairs that the rock had been worn smooth by the wind and weather, or maybe by the passing of many feet and were quite practicable for ascent. The angle at which they rose was steep too.

The ascent was easy enough for me,

especially that flatterer in the center."

I have since talked with men and studied the writings of learned geologists. They decided that perhaps the rocky point in the middle of the valley, we saw the great altar of sacrifice attendant idols later on, was the final island, which was once situated by a coral reef, which was come a wall, and that some great upheaval had lifted the whole up the water in ages gone by and the barrier reef over which passed was the second attempt busy little insects to surround land again.

"What is to be done now?" asked little mistress.

"I hardly know," I answered, "is exercising me most now is, all, what is going on in that saturnal ship, and, next, how to finally get away from here."

"You are impatient," returned lady, smiling.

"Impatient for you, madam," interrupted, checking myself from self revealing speech just in time.

"One thing at a time," she cried. "By the favor of God, we have from the murderers and me. We shall not starve upon this and I have no doubt that so later you will devise some means of our escape."

It was past noon by this time made sure of it by looking at and confirming it by my watch. I most carefully kept running all our sojourn on the island indicated close on two bells. Our talk of the ship recalled myself.

"I think," said I, "that we will postpone the exploration of land until another day and go to our landing place. If I know men on that ship they will give us a hand. We have escaped to this island they will bring her round to the place where we may have them and they us."

"Think you that they can do us?" she asked, in sudden alarm.

"I think not," I answered calmly, "but still to make sure I like to have them under observation."

Well, to make a long story short retraced our steps over the path until we reached the stairs on the other side. The descent was much easier than the ascent. By 2 of the clock we stepped sand again. There before us loomed the ship. We saw quite plainly, and I doubt not caught sight of us immediately. They were scarcely a quarter mile away from the reef, perhaps nearer, I thought, and we could then be crowding the rail and looking landward. We could see their dishes their weapons and we imagine the yells which must have arisen from the decks where they caught sight of us.

The ruffians aboard the ship content themselves with simply staring at us, for presently they bled on the port quarter—the ship under all plain sail on the starboard at the time, the wind having been to a gentle breeze during the day and clambered into the cutter, hanging at the davits. As she was

"I said at last, 'there ought for us but to try to go over the reef in some fashion. As I examined the island yesterday through the glasses I couldn't see any opening in the reef on that side, and, although I never saw or heard of a case like this before, I make no doubt but that the reef is continuous and there is no access to the island except over it. And come to think of it, Sir Philip's chart showed no opening either.'"

"I recall that the reef completely encircled the island in the main," seconded my lady.

"Then we must each pass over it as we can. I have had some experience in taking a boat through the surf, and, although it is a prodigious risk, I believe I can take this one over. I think we shall win through if you will sit perfectly quiet and trust to me."

"I will do whatever you tell me," she said with a most becoming and unusual meekness. "I think—I know—I trust you entirely, Master Hampdon."

"Very well," said I quietly, "and may God help us!"

Fortunately, the tide was making toward the shore of the island. I selected a spot where the huge, rolling waves seemed to break more smoothly than elsewhere, which argued a greater depth of water over the barrier, less roughness and fewer possibilities of being wrecked on the jagged points of the coral reef. Dousing the sail, unshipping the tiller and rudder and pulling the oars with all my strength after an unuttered prayer I shot the boat directly toward the spot I had chosen. Just before I reached it I threw the oars inboard, seized one of them, which I wished to use as a steering oar, and stepped aft past my lady, who sat a little forward and well down in the bottom of the boat. I braced myself in the stern sheets and waited. We were racing toward that reef with dizzy speed, rising with the uplift of the wave. I had just time for one word.

"If we die," I shouted, "remember that I have been your true servant always!"

She nodded her head, her eyes glistening, and then I lost sight of her. A huge roller overtook us. The little boat rose and rose and rose with a giddy, furious motion. Suddenly it began to turn. If it went broadside to the reef and a wave caught it or one broke over it we should be lost, but I had foreseen the danger. I threw out my oar and with every pound of strength in arm, leg and body I thrust blindly, desperately, against the thrust of the sea. It was an unequal combat, a man against the Pacific ocean. I couldn't have maintained it for long. And yet it seemed hours. The strain was terrific.

The wave we were riding broke just as we reached the top. We sank down into what seemed a valley of water, the breakers roared in our ears, the spray fell over us like rain. We sank lower and lower, there was a sound of grinding along the keel. We had struck the coral evidently. I thought this was all, for another moment and the bottom would have been ripped out of her; but no, we were over in safety.

The last remainder of the wave broke fairly over us and struck me in the back as I stood aft with such force as to bring me to my knees. However, in that position I acted as a sort of breakwater and the dinghy was not completely filled. Although she had shipped quantities of sea, she still floated. The force with which we had been thrown over the crest of the wave drove us landward with tremendous speed. It was terrific. I was stunned for a moment, but the sweetest voice in the world recalled me to my senses.

"It was glorious, magnificent!" cried my mistress exultantly. "Are you hurt? Are we safe?"

Her clothes had been drenched, of course, but she was otherwise unharmed, and there was a strange light in her eyes.

"I am not hurt," I answered. "God has preserved me thus far."

"For me," she said softly.

"For your service," I answered gravely, quite understanding that was what she meant.

And now to make the landing. The boat, while it had come to a standstill, was filled with water, but I couldn't stop to bail it out then, so I stepped carefully forward, shipped the oars and rowed slowly forward across the lagoon.

CHAPTER XI.

How We Landed on the Wondrous Shore.

ALTHOUGH our progress in the water laden boat was slow, it didn't take us long to reach the shore, which was there nothing more than a strip of sand perhaps a hundred yards across at the widest part. It was as bare of anything as the palm of my hand. I hauled the boat up on it after we had disembarked and hastened to discharge its precious cargo. The invaluable powder and shot had been kept in cans and flasks in air tight lockers forward and aft and were undamaged. The rest of her lading had been in the water too short a time to be much hurt. It was all water soaked, of course, but an hour's exposure in the warm sun on the dry sand would make it as good as new. Spreading all out to dry I pulled the plug from the boat, drained the water from her and hauled her up well on to the sand.

A hasty glance assured me that the reef was of coral formation, jagged and broken with many a crevice and cranny. After we had made everything shipshape I suggested to Mistress Lucy that we start at once exploring. I proposed that we follow the course of the sandy strip and see if there was not some break in the cliffs whereby we could get to the top and learn what was within the wall. And so refreshing ourselves and taking with us some provisions, for we might have to go clear around the island, we presently started out.

I felt very easy in my mind regarding any present peril from the ship, for I knew that no boat she possessed could run the reef as I had done, and even if she had had another like the dinghy I was confident that there was no man aboard her that had the strength and skill, to say nothing of the courage, to bring her through. If there were no natives or wild beasts to be feared we were at least safe for the time being.

"Think you, Master Hampdon," said my little mistress, "this is the island of which my ancestor wrote?"

"I am sure of it," I replied.

"He referred to it, if I remember right, as the 'Island of the Stairs,' did he not?"

"Yes," was my answer. "You remember he indicated a stairway about the middle of the island."

"Surely, if we are to get to the top

leading the way, and she was so preoccupied that she did not notice.

I observed as we approached the stairs that the rock had been worn smooth by the wind and weather, or maybe by the passing of many feet and were quite practicable for ascent. The angle at which they rose was steep too.

The ascent was easy enough for me, but hard for her, and several times I made bold to lift her up the higher steps, which she suffered without complaining. She told me long afterward that my manner toward her then and thereafter had been perfect.

When we at last reached the top before us lay a broad pathway rudely paved with the same hard stone. This road led straight into the interior of the island of which we could see as yet nothing, because the wall hereabouts was covered with dense, luxurious vegetation. Progress was difficult even in the pathway. It would have been impossible in some places but for my heavy cutlass with which I cut a path where the place had become overgrown by trees and bushes which had forced their way through the cracks, overturning and breaking the heavy flagstones and blocking up the path, which it was evident had not been traversed for generations, perhaps not since the old buccaneer himself had walked along it beneath the spreading trees.

For perhaps a mile we pursued our journey across the top of the wall, winding in and out among the trees through the jungle, the path evidently seeking the most level direction, for the top of the wall was very much broken and irregular.

At last we came to an open spot on the inner edge overlooking the whole island, and before us lay such a picture as few eyes, at least of our race, had ever looked upon. The wall ended abruptly and fell on the inner or landward side as precipitously as it rose outwardly and to seaward. Before us lay a most entrancing valley, perhaps three or four miles across and maybe half as long again in the other direction and which was walled about on every hand. It was sunk beneath this wall crest for perhaps 100 feet or more.

In the center of the valley the land rose a little higher than the island wall in a very considerable hill, tree crowned on the slopes, but largely bare on the crest. Through the valley ran a brook, which ended in a little lake, which I suspected had some subterranean connection with the ocean. As far as we could see—and the whole circuit of the island was now clearly visible to us—the inclosing wall was unbroken. The valley was filled with clusters of trees and alternating stretches of grassy meadow.

We should have been hard put to it to descend the wall to the valley were it not for the fact that the same people who built the stairs that gave access to the wall from the sea had built a similar flight which led to the valley. Before we essayed the descent of the stairs we drank our fill of the beauty and mysterious charm of it all. Indeed, there was no sound that came to us except the twittering of the birds, of which there were many, brilliantly plumaged, fluttering in the trees. All else was still, lonely, deserted, oppressively so in fact.

"What think you of this?" My lady broke the silence. "Is it not like the crater of a volcano?"

"No," said I; "these are coral rocks, and there is no sign of lava about them, yet it has somewhat of the ap-

ing at us, for presently they bled on the port quarter—the ship under all plain sail on the star tack at the time, the wind hailing to a gentle breeze during the and clambered into the cutter, ing at the davits. As she was lo-

"Let us fly! They are coming to us!" she cried in great alarm.

"But they are on a vain errand, reassured her.

"But why? How can you say that? Oh, Master Hampdon, hasten away."

"We have a protector," I answered confidently enough.

"God?" asked she.

"His handiwork," I replied, indicated with a gesture the barrier over which the waves were breaking.

"But we passed it."

"Yes, in a light dinghy, and I remember the difficulty and danger. They will never surmount it, heavy cutter. They will not attempt me."

"But if there should be an opportunity, I don't believe there is one, my reassuring reply. 'I have no doubt that they can get at us.'"

"And we can't get to them, answered more composedly.

"I have no wish so to do," laughed.

"You don't understand me," she insisted. "What keeps them out of us in."

"Yes," I admitted, "that is true for the present I don't mind being in so long as they are kept out."

CHAPTER XIII.

Inside the Barrier.

WE trudged along the sand par- allel to the boat, which was following the course of the barrier reef, seeking what I knew they would not find—an entrance to the lagoon and thence to the island. The lagoon narrowed in places, until had it not been for the roar of the waves in the reef a hail could easily have carried. I am ashamed to say that I used insulting gestures on oc- casion, whereat some of them stood up in the boat and shook their fists in our direction. Although I was sure they could not reach us, their presence was a menace and a barrier to us. After they had rowed the length of the is- land they gave it up and went back to the ship, which had followed their course.

By this time the day was far spent. We retraced our steps and came to the place where I had hauled up the dingy. We were hungry. The provisions we had taken with us we had eaten during the journey. The first business was supper. I had noticed some cocoanut trees and other strange tropical fruits, so I had no fear of starvation. We could live on the is- land indefinitely; therefore I was not sparing with the provisions. We kindled a fire and made shift to boil some coffee. We had neither milk nor sugar, but the taste of civilization did us good.

For the night I capsize the boat and drew it close against the coral wall, spread the sail and boat cloak upon the clean, dry sand, gave her one blanket and bade her take her rest. It was snug, dry and comfortable.

"But you?" she asked.

"I shall do very well here with my boat cloak and one of the blankets, and I shall lie across the stern of the boat between it and the cliff, out of sight, but within touch or call if you need me."

"I am afraid," she said softly.

"Nothing can come to you except over my body, and I am a light sleep- er. Anything will rouse me," I said reassuringly.

"I would not have you harmed, either," she persisted.

"I shall not be."

"There may be wild beasts."

"I do not think there is an animal on this island," I laughed, "and we have seen no signs of man. The ship certainly would have attracted the at- tention of some one had not the island been deserted."

"But those men out there?"

"You forget the rampart that God has flung about us. Now, madam, you can go to sleep in safety. I assure you."

"Before that," she said, dropping down on her knees in the sand and motioning me to follow her example, which I did awkwardly enough—I hope I am not a mocker or disbeliever, but I confess that I didn't often bend the knee—"we will have a prayer to- gether."

She had slipped a little prayer book within her dress, and she now drew it forth from her bosom and by the

She had slipped a little prayer book within her dress, and she now drew it forth from her bosom and by the light of the fire read the Psalm of David, which begins: "Out of the deep have I called unto thee, O Lord. Lord, hear my voice." And then she prayed, using some of the old collects of the church and adding one of her own making in which she besought God to care for us further, while she thanked him for having raised up a defense for her in my poor person, only she did not so describe it. I listened very humbly, saying a heartfelt "Amen" at the end.

There was a silence for a little space when she had finished, and in that silence I devoted myself before God to her service again, and then she rose and gave me her hand.

"You have been a true knight and gentleman," she said softly, her eyes shining, "and I thank you."

I could only take it dumbly and stare at her like the great fool I was, whereat she smiled brightly, although her eyes suddenly filled with tears.

"And now," she added: "God keep you. Good night."

I then kissed her extended hand, which she suffered without resistance.

I sat for a long time before the fire, thinking and making plans for our escape. The ship didn't give me much concern, because I was sure she couldn't come at us and in the end she must go away and leave us.

A long time I sat there until I finally fell asleep. I must have slept some time and soundly for I was wearied. It was she who awakened me. When I opened my eyes and saw her sweet face bending over me and heard her dear voice calling me I declare I almost felt as if I had died and gone to heaven and was being welcomed by an angel.

Our first waking thought was for the ship. She was still there in the offing. She had been here to during the night. I could imagine what fierce debate and wrangling there were aboard her.

The day that passed was much like the afternoon before. Although we were by this time persuaded that the reef was an absolute protection, a vague possibility that they could devise means to pass it in some way kept us uneasy on the sand. We must have them under observation. We were eager to explore the beautiful vale inclosed by the huge rampart, but we did not dare to be where we could not watch the ship. We did walk along the shore and ascend the giant stairs in the afternoon, then, while she watched the sea within calling distance of me, I managed to penetrate the jungle with ax in hand, so that finally I made shift to cut down a cocoa palm tree, and we gathered as many delicious nuts as we could carry and returned to the shore.

That night the sun set amid lowering clouds. With a sailor's weather sense, I was sure that we should have a storm. Pinball and Glibby sensed it too. We could see them making things snug aloft and aloft. They were good enough seamen, as far as that goes. The wind, if it came, would be off shore, and there would be no danger of the ship being driven upon our reef, but there were islands to leeward, which they seemed to have forgotten, which I remembered.

I explained all this to my little mistress as I made things snug for the night. She would be perfectly protected by the overhang of the cliff and the overturned boat, and I told her, although I left her alone in the boat, that the same overhang of the cliff would protect me from the wind and the rain if the storm broke. And so after prayers again and a long look seaward we went to sleep.

About midnight, so far as I could judge, I was awakened. The storm broke with all the suddenness and intensity of the tropics. Such peals of thunder and such flashes of lightning I have never witnessed, although I had been in many storms throughout the world. To sleep was impossible. Mistress Lucy came out from her boat and stood beside me as we leaned against the cliff while the storm drove harmlessly over our heads.

We could see the ship at intervals by the vivid flashes of lightning. She was making fearful weather of it. She was always a wet ship, and the huge waves fairly rolled over her. Once she went over nearly on her beam ends, and I thought she was gone. I didn't view her position with a great deal of regret either. Presently she drove off before the wind with a rag of her foretops still showing, and that was the last we saw of her or her men, we thought.

Storm bound under the lee of the cliffs, we passed long and anxious hours the next day, although our only misfortune was the inclemency of the weather, for we were completely sheltered, and we had plenty of the refreshing milk of the cocoanut to vary our other food. The second day after it began the tempest finally blew itself out, although the great surging seas still broke tremendously over the barrier reef and the spray shot a score of feet or more above the crests of the highest waves. It was only the reflex of the storm, however, for during the night the wind had subsided into a gentle breeze.

When we scanned the sea next morning there was, of course, no sign of the ship. Our first inclination, and there was none to say us nay now, was to mount the stairs, cross the wall and look for that cave. We had neither chart nor record left, we had but our memories to trust to, but we were both agreed that the cave lay in the inner wall and that the parchment said it was the central one of three adjacent openings which gave entrance to the treasure chamber. And we could get a bearing on it from the central hill.

Now I had noticed that the coral wall both on the outer and inner sides was honeycombed with openings, rifts, fissures and caves which, by the way, were more frequent and deeper on the inside face, why I know not. We should have been compelled painfully and laboriously to search the whole face of the cliff in its extent of fifteen miles or so, but for the further direction of the parchment. I was thankful that, sailor like, old Sir Philip had given us the bearing. How did his words run? Something like this, my memory told me.

"Toe fynde ye mouthe of ye tresur cave take ye bearings alonge ye southe of ye three Goddess on ye Altar of Skulls on ye middel hille. Whi ye line strykes ye bigge knicke in ye walle with ye talle palmme, his tree, bee three houles. Climb ye stones. Enter ye centre. Yt is there."

Plainly our first duty was to descend into the inclosed valley and explore the hillock in the center. I made no doubt but that we should find some sort of an altar and more of those curious stone images there. If they still remained the rest of our task would be comparatively easy.

With this determination, therefore, we set out. As I did not know how long our exploration would require and as I rather thought we should have to make a day of it, we started betimes. Indeed, as we invariably retired shortly after sunset we naturally rose at break of day. I took along food enough for the day, knowing that we could get water from the brooks and certain fruits which I judged would be good for us from the trees.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

well ventilated quarters success in sheep husbandry is assured, according to Frank Kleinheinz, shepherd of the Wisconsin experiment station flocks.

The choice of feed depends to a large extent upon the condition in which the breeding flocks enter winter quarters.

There are several breeds of sheep which run naturally to good size. Take the Shropshires, the Hampshires, the Oxfords, the Lincolns, the Cotswolds or the Cheviots, all of which are inclined to grow to good size, and one will make no mistake in feeding and breeding for meat. These sheep all produce lambs freely, and the lambs are as thrifty and fast to grow as are the old sheep, soon coming to marketable size. Most of these sheep, too, may be classed as twin bearing, another point in their favor. The illustration shows a Cheviot wether.

If in good flesh and having access to good roughage, such as clover, millet, alfalfa hay and roots or corn silage, hardly any grain is necessary, but if the sheep are in a thin, weak condition no time should be lost in supplying them with hearty grain rations. Otherwise results at lambing time will be disappointing.

Pure water should be supplied the flock at all times, and salt should be kept where the sheep may have ready access to it. Successful flockmasters consider it a serious mistake to provide their sheep with salt but occasionally, for under these conditions they are apt to eat too much, which oftentimes causes excessive drinking of water and a derangement of the digestive organs.

Raising Hogs Cheaply.

In raising hogs cheaply it is necessary to begin with the sows. They must be fed well in order to produce a good litter of strong, vigorous pigs. Oats are a splendid feed. They are a well balanced food. Corn is not suitable. It is too fattening. Also provide plenty of pure water. Exercise is necessary. This can be provided by feeding the oats on a feeding floor scattering it thinly. It is not necessary to grind the oats.

Lice on Horses.

The first symptoms of lice infection of horses are always manifested by considerable itching of the skin, says the Kansas Farmer. The best remedies probably are some of the coal tar products now on the market. These remedies can be used in the proportion of one part of the remedy to fifty parts water. Careful washing of the part affected will destroy the lice. The nits or eggs, however, will hatch in from five to ten days, and a second application must be made about ten days after the first in order to destroy the lice hatched from these eggs. In treating animals for lice it is always well

THE IDEAL RATION FOR DAIRY COWS

It is not possible to give a ration that will suit all conditions and all kinds of cows. In general, however, it may be said that the first requisite of an ideal ration for a good dairy cow is to feed all the roughage (soiling crop, hay, silage, roots, etc.) she will eat up clean and one pound of concentrates (bran, chop, all kinds of grain, soy bean meal, etc.) for each three to four pounds of milk she produces. In most cases it will be found that this will be just about all she will eat regularly without going off feed. The second requisite in an ideal ration

For milk production the Holstein cow is unexcelled. Other breeds of dairy cattle give milk testing higher in butter fat, but for performance at the pail the Holstein stands pre-eminent. The photograph here reproduced shows a few of the cows of a herd of Holsteins maintained at Sayville, N. Y., by W. E. Slater. Recently twenty-four of this herd were shipped to the Arizona State hospital. Nothing but pure bred is kept in the herd.

is that it should be nutritious. The ration should be sufficiently bulky on the one hand to fully distend the stomach and other digestive organs, and at the same time there should be enough digestible material to fully meet the requirements of the animal. Practical experience is reached when about two-thirds of the total dry matter of the ration is in the form of roughage and one-third in the form of concentrates.

In addition to this an ideal ration should be palatable so that an animal will eat it with relish. While little is known concerning the effect of palatability, it is certainly true that of two feeds alike in all others respects the one most readily eaten by the animal will be the more effective.

The secretion of milk seems to be intimately connected with the water content of the food. The cow needs a large amount of water to drink, but aside from this there is a demand for feeds containing a high percentage of water, such as green forage, silage, roots, etc. The cow's digestion is kept in much better tone when such feeds

A GOOD FARROWING PEN.

Small Portable Huts Best For the Sow and Litter.

A farrowing pen made from fencing boards, light and portable, five feet square, is one of the handy arrangements on our farm and indispensable in farrowing time, writes G. O. Brown in the National Stockman. This pen may be set up anywhere on the farm—in a shed, on the barn floor or in the basement, in the open barn lot about the straw stacks or wherever comfort exists for the advent of the youngsters.

The dam can get no nesting material save what we give her and cannot smother her pigs in the litter. We have each of our A shaped hog bunks built from matched barn siding with open front door, and fitted in the top ridge of each is a hook upon which we hang a lighted lantern, excluding all frosted air from the interior. Over the doors we tack temporarily a piece of burlap with a light piece of board at the bottom, which holds the curtain in place.

The dam can go out for feed and the youngsters are not exposed to the chill winds. On sunny days these curtains are fastened up and the sunshine admitted. Dry nesting material adds greatly to the health of the dam and the stuff of the early litter and is

THE GRADING OF SHEEP.

Breeders and Feeders Should Be Separated In Winter Quarters.

To make the best gains, sheep, when brought into winter quarters, should be separated into several different flocks. The breeding ewes should be kept separate from the lambs, rams and the feeding flock. Weak, thin ewes should be separately yarded so that they may get their share of the feed. Rams should be kept in lots of ample size so as to allow them plenty of exercise.

By taking these precautions and regularly providing the flocks with suitable feed and an abundance of fresh water and by sheltering them in clean, alies can be used in the proportion of one part of the remedy to fifty parts water. Careful washing of the part affected will destroy the lice. The nits or eggs, however, will hatch in from five to ten days, and a second application must be made about ten days after the first in order to destroy the lice hatched from these eggs. In treating animals for lice it is always well to pick out a warm day and give them a sheltered spot where they can dry out in the warm sunshine without being chilled.

Treatment For Sore Teats.

Cows inclined to have sore teats should always be milked with dry hands in the winter time. There is nothing that has a greater tendency to aggravate this difficulty than the wetting of the hands during the milking process. Vaseline is very useful in treating sore teats. Carbolyzed vaseline is even better than pure vaseline. This can be purchased, or a little carbolic acid may be mixed with ordinary vaseline. An oxide of zinc ointment may be made by using one ounce zinc oxide to four ounces benzoated lard. This ointment is good for dry sores of any kind.—Kansas Farmer.

the one most readily eaten by the animal will be the more effective.

The secretion of milk seems to be intimately connected with the water content of the food. The cow needs a large amount of water to drink, but aside from this there is a demand for feeds containing a high percentage of water, such as green forage, silage, roots, etc. The cow's digestion is kept in much better tone when such feeds are used.

To have an exact balance between the protein and the carbohydrates and fat is not so important as was once thought; for milk production it is necessary to have a larger amount of protein than for beef animals, but a dairy ration is now considered fairly satisfactory if the nutritive ration falls anywhere between 1:4.4 and 1:6.5.

Last of all the ideal ration should be composed of such feeds as will furnish the largest amount of digestible nutrients at the lowest cost. This necessitates the liberal use of home grown feeds with proper selection of those which must be purchased.—A. B. Nystrom, Washington Experiment Station.

Handling Hogs In Winter.

The successful hog growers use a little system in handling their fall and winter hogs the same as they do when handling other valuable stock. If the farmer wants his pigs to grow as fast as possible he will probably give them a mixture of 95 per cent corn chop and 5 per cent tankage the first thing in the morning. He will then slop the herd along about 9 or 10 o'clock. He will give the herd just enough feed at both of these times so they will clean it up and be slightly anxious for more. Alfalfa hay will be in evidence at all times. The hogs will be sloped again about 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon and given chop and tankage again the last thing in the evening. This is one method of feeding. There are others.

Remedy For Horse Itch.

Horses seem sometimes to be affected with a serious itching of the skin at the roots of the mane and likewise the roots of the hair about the tail which cannot be attributed to lice. The remedy which is suggested for an infection of this kind is to thoroughly wash the part affected with soap and water and after drying apply an iodine ointment, rubbing it in carefully. The iodine ointment may be made by taking one-half dram of iodide of potash and one ounce of lard. Laxative food and a four ounce dose of salts until the bowels are moving well will be a benefit to the horses in this condition. Intestinal worms, and especially pin worms, occasionally cause more or less rubbing of the tail.

Watering the Horse.

Always water the horse after he has eaten his hay at night. Do not go to bed leaving him thirsty all night.

The Kitchen Floor.

Kitchen floors that are not covered become worn and splintered often with much scrubbing. Rather than suffer risk getting splinters from them have the floor planed smooth and the cracks filled with a wood filler. Then rub crude oil over it repeatedly at intervals. The oil hardens, and stains do not readily sink into the wood. Never wax or varnish a floor that must be washed with water. Water will quickly discolor polished hard wood floors.

Concrete walks need no repairs

THEY are not only best at first but are cheaper in the end than any other kind of walk. They are clean, permanent and safe. There is nothing to become loose nor are they slippery. They improve the general appearance of a house and are a source of great satisfaction to every housewife because they keep children out of the mud, prevent colds from wet feet and prevent dirt from being "tracked in" on floors and carpets. Equally important is the fact that they never wear out and never need repairs.

This free book "What the Farmer can do with Concrete" tells all about concrete walks and how to build them, and a score of other things needed on every farm. Write for it to-day.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

An Exceptional Occupation For Women—The Sunshine Lady.

HOW IT IS ACCOMPLISHED.

The Sending of Flowers to Ill Persons Is Often More of a Burden to Them Than a Blessing—Making Swirly Frosting For Cake.

Dear Elsa—Women who never in their comfortable lives have earned a cent are nowadays breaking out into the most unexpected occupations. One of the strangest ways of earning a livelihood is being carried on by an acquaintance of mine. She markets sunshine and good cheer. Did you know that these qualities were being commercialized?

Well, to tell the story of this girl from the beginning: Several months ago, upon the death of her father, the wage earning of the family was thrust upon her. She had, unfortunately, no business training and, as far as she knew, no business ability. But necessity again became the mother of invention. Summing up her personal assets, she found that they consisted, for the most part, of a cheerful disposition and a pleasant smile. She determined to turn these assets to account.

Her plan was simply to charge a fee for the sunshine and cheerfulness she contributed.

"You know," she said to me the other day, "I realized that there were lots of people who would pay for being put into good spirits. This is the reason why theaters are so successful. But there are as many more persons who prefer the quieter forms of amusement, playing cards or checkers or even discussing the latest fashions. What they desire most is cheerful human companionship. It was to these people that I decided to sell my services."

Her decision, from all appearances, was a wise one, as the sunshine business, even in this short while, is a flourishing industry, and her clients all pay cheerfully for her unusual commodities.

Of course her duties are varied, and to be a professionally cheerful person is a tax upon one's sense of humor. This plucky girl tells stories to invalids, cheers up the sick, gossips with the ladies, old and young, if need be; plays games with those who are lonely, amuses children or entertains at luncheon or dinner for a hostess who is called away. So you see my friend is indeed a sunshine lady.

Speaking of ill people, Margaret D. is at the E's hospital convalescing from the effect of a severe operation. I went to see her yesterday and found her surrounded by the most beautiful floral offerings from friends. Remarkable upon the loveliness of the blossoms brought forth a very pertinent question from the invalid:

"Why do friends smother an ill person with flowers during the first few days of an illness, when she is too exhausted even to look at a bouquet of flowers, much less to endure their fragrance? Why do they not save them for the tedious days of convalescence."

It never occurred to me that this is exactly the way flowers are sent to the sick. The moment one hears that a friend has to undergo an operation or is in for a siege of fever off one goes to the florist. This duty performed, there is probably not a thought of sending any more flowers.

Wouldn't it be much better to wait a week or two until the first rush of bouquets is over and until the patient is in a condition to enjoy flowers before sending them?

It is too often the case that during the first period of illness the flowers are really nauseating, and the only pleasure the patient gets from them is to read later the cards of those who bombarded the sickroom with choice but really unappreciated offerings.

So, dear, you liked the frosting "particularly" on the cake I sent you by parcel post and want to know how I did it. Certainly you shall know. Make ordinary boiled icing and, after you have beaten it stiff enough to hold its own firmly on a cake, empty it into a double boiler. Place the boiler over a good fire that will keep the water in the lower pan at a brisk boil. Do not stir the frosting at all, but watch it until it begins to fudge around the sides of the pan.

Then take it from the stove and beat it in the pan until it is cool enough and thick enough to swirl on your cake, holding its own in whatever position you wish it to penetrate.

If you let it get too cool it will harden in the pan, perhaps, before you have finished frosting your cake. This will happen if you are frosting small cakes which take time to cover one by one. If it does harden, a little hot water beaten in will remedy the difficulty.

It is the double boiling, dear, which gives the frosting the enviable fudgy, marshmallowy consistency that you liked.

And be sure not to use a knife to put on the frosting when you want it to have a swirling, irregular appearance. Use a fork handle and you will make just as good frosting as yours faithfully,

MABEL.

New York.

To Keep Cake Fresh.

Most housewives know that an apple in the cake box will help to keep cake fresh and moist, but if there is cake in the house and no apple put a glass of clear water in the box and the same result will be achieved.

SUFFERED AGONY WITH NEURALGIA

Nothing Helped Her Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

CAMPBELLVILLE, ONT., May 5th, 1913.

"I cannot speak too highly of 'Fruit-a-tives'. For over thirty years, I have suffered from Chronic Neuralgia and Constipation, experiencing untold agony. The Neuralgia settled in my lungs and I took bottle after bottle of medicine without relief. The doctor told me I would not get better but 'Fruit-a-tives' proved that the doctor was wrong, by giving me quick relief and finally and completely curing me.

I would not have my present health if it was not for 'Fruit-a-tives' and I am glad of the opportunity of giving you this letter about such a splendid remedy as 'Fruit-a-tives', for the guidance of other women who may be similarly affected."

Mrs. NATHAN DUNN.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine made from fruit juices and is particularly suited to women because of its mild action and pleasant taste.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WATERPROOFING CLOTH.

Wiley Got the Idea From an Accident in a Dyehouse.

The waterproofing of cloth so universal today was unknown twenty-five years ago. In 1890 Thomas Fearnley Wiley of Bedford, England, took out the first patent for the process known as waterproofing cloth.

He got the idea from an accident in a Yorkshire dyehouse. Certain goods had been wrongly dyed, and the workmen were directed to wash out the surplus logwood color with alum. After the goods had been dried the improvement was so marked that the dyer ordered a repetition of the alum washing. The cloth was sent to the wetting machine, but the workmen found that they could not wet it. It passed through the water and came out dry. Thus was the discovery made that cloth could be waterproof and yet remain porous.

The process used today is as follows:

Cloths intended for rainproofing are first freed from grease and are then saturated in specially constructed machines with the clear liquor obtained in adding together solutions of pure sulphate of alumina and acetate of lead. The lead is precipitated out, and the acetate of alumina is dried in the fabric. The cloth undergoes further treatment with wax, and in one system wax is applied frictionally from a block under the pressure of a pneumatic roller. Under the method more generally used the wax, or mixture of waxes, is melted by heat and applied in an infinitesimally fine film by the action of a doctor roller.

Trinity Church Notes.

The musical evening given by the Young People's Association on Monday evening was a pronounced success.
The musical department received unstinted praise for the excellency of the programme. The large congregation was more than delighted. The conference programme committee met in the ladies parlour on Thursday morning to arrange the programme for the coming conference which will be held in Trinity church beginning Wednesday June 3rd. At a former meeting of the Trustee and Official Boards held cordial and unanimous invitation to remain for a third year. Rev. John Scanlon preached two excellent sermons on Sunday last in the absence of the pastor who was preaching anniversary sermons in Brockville.
